Risk of HIV and STI infection in a large urban cohort of transgender women. To characterize factors associated with prevalent HIV and sexually transmitted infection (STI) infection in a large cohort of transgender women. We prospectively enrolled transwomen from one large health center in San Francisco and a gender affirming hormone clinic in the Boston area. We measured prevalent HIV and STI infection at baseline and evaluated factors associated with incident infection. Three hundred and fifty-two transgender women completed follow-up (75% of estimated enrollment), and 368 (96%) agreed to collect genital specimens. Median age at enrollment was 23 years, and 69% were HIV-positive, 21% had HSV-2, and 21% had gonorrhea at enrollment. There was no significant change in the incidence of any HIV or STI over the 2-year follow-up period. The incidence of HIV was 7.4 per 100 person-years (95% confidence interval [CI]: 5.2-10.7), of which 5.5 per 100 person-years (95% CI: 3.8-8.0) was attributable to acquisition. Factors associated with incident HIV included age younger than 21 years (hazard ratio [HR]: 3.5, 95% CI: 1.9-6.4), history of injecting drugs (HR: 1.7, 95% CI: 1.0-2.9), and recent receptive oral sex (HR: 2.4, 95% CI: 1.2-5.2). Factors associated with incident HSV-2 included injecting drugs (HR: 2.2, 95% CI: 1.1-4.6), genital herpes (HR: 2.0, 95% CI: 1.2-3.4), and sex work (HR: 1.9, 95% CI: 1.1-3.5). Factors associated with incident gonorrhea included age younger than 21 years (HR: 2.2, 95% CI: 1.1
