If I check the regex online, this seems to be working, but it's not. Could someone point out the error in my regex? A: The lookbehind (?Let's start with a word of warning: If you don't like surprises, don't read the following. If you don't like surprises and are someone who enjoys being surprised, then I don't know how you could be reading this. Let's get to the real secret: I told you I'd give you three clues. It's going to be close. The clues were presented last week on Twitter, and they're easy to miss if you don't know how to look for them. The first clue is the actual name of this book, and it's hard to find because no one seems to know the real name of the book, although it's been widely reviewed and discussed in the media. It's "Chinatown." Here's the clue: When you think of Chinatown, what do you think of? (Hint: It has nothing to do with Chinese food.) When you find that clue, you'll have to figure out the second one. The second clue is a book cover. The author used a simple, very famous visual image of a building that you will have to look for on
