Food group consumption among a low-income cohort. To describe the food group consumption patterns of low-income parents with children in the first grade. Longitudinal study. Participants were recruited from three public health clinics in a mid-sized northeastern city. Participants were parents of first graders. Sociodemographic data were collected at baseline. Food intake was assessed at 6 and 12 months postpartum using 24-hour recall. Approximately half (n=289) of the mothers in the cohort reported eating at least one type of a high-fat, salty snack at least once in the past 24 hours at 6 months postpartum. At 12 months postpartum, about one-quarter (n=77) reported consuming a high-fat, salty snack at least once. Fewer than 50% of the mothers reported eating fruit and vegetables daily at both time periods. Healthier eating patterns, including more fruit and vegetable consumption, were more likely to be reported at 6 months postpartum than at 12 months postpartum. Research suggests that young children of low-income families are not making the healthful dietary transitions that are commonly seen in more affluent populations. Parental education may influence the success of these transitions.

Q: Change the text of the button onclick from another button I have a dynamically created button that I have to use a common function for. I don't want to use anything more than a button. In the function, I have some kind of if statement that when the button is clicked it has to change the text of the button to a special text. I have also created a function that works with the dynamically created button. When I try to apply the function that changes the text, I get an error: "cannot set property 'onclick' of null" Also, I want the function to change the text only for a specific button and it won't change anything for others. My code is this: `function addButton(text, className) { var div = document.createElement("div"); div.innerHTML = '`
