I want to completely disable the keychain on my Mac so that it is not possible to access the keychain on my machine. The content of the keychain is accessible via Keychain Access. In there, I can find the following folders and keys: Login Items Login Items (diagnostics) .loginItems .loginItems (diagnostics) com.apple.access_sfv.plist However, I was not able to find a configuration file containing the password of the keychain; there is none. My question: Where is the password stored? A: Keychains live in the security sandbox, and are not accessible to other processes in the same sandbox. If you kill your keychain-containing process, that process will get an error when it tries to access the keychain, and a dialog will be shown that shows you that error. last week. After being offline for a day, the site reappeared to point to a threat on the Pirate Bay's twitter account. "We have been the target of a cyber attack. Thanks to the research and dedication of @drmtchnik a step towards the full security of #piratebay has been taken," the tweet read. The self-described clean up group, Anonymous, added: "Future targets will get more and better robots! No exceptions!" The Pirate Bay is currently hosted by French-based site OVH. OVH published a statement to
