The U.S. military has responded to the recent cross-border incursion by North Korea's military by beefing up its forces in the region. A South Korean official told CNN that the U.S. sent 300 additional troops to the area, reinforcing the northern front. "The Pentagon notified us that it had increased its force posture in South Korea by 300 to 3,300 soldiers and an undisclosed number of Marines for an exercise," South Korean Foreign Ministry spokesman Moon Se-hyun said Friday, according to CNN. CNN cited the South Korean defense ministry as saying there were no signs of aggressive military activity by the North. North Korea has said the more than 20-strong team that crossed the border was a service unit that was performing military drills. On April 27, a team of North Korean soldiers crossed into the demilitarized zone separating the two Koreas. They carried out what the North called a "military drill" and the South said was an attempt to spy on the border. The team was trying to examine facilities along the Joint Security Area, which is the only place where the two Koreas come face to face, after being ordered to probe for a possible underground tunnel between the two countries, according to the South. North Korea has accused U.S. forces of breaking the armistice that ended the Korean War and a South Korean soldier who was killed in a skirmish with the

the Invention The invention relates to a clamping rail for a data carrier with a receiver, whereby the data carrier, in the area of the receiver, has a clamping area with at least one area having at least two clamping elements at least partly arranged at an angle relative to each other. 2. Description of the Related Art The arrangement of at least one clamping rail of a data carrier of the kind set forth in the opening part of this specification, is known from the published European Patent Application EP 2 057 588 A1. This clamping rail makes it possible to hold the data carrier of a so-called “CD jewel case”, in particular a compact disk, at a predetermined distance from a data carrier support. The clamping rail has at least two clamping elements arranged at an angle relative to each other. In this case, the clamping elements of the clamping rail are arranged on a clamping rail body. The clamping elements at least partly surround the area, which is to be clamped. The clamping elements can be moved towards the receiver, so that the clamping elements are situated at a distance from the area to be clamped which is smaller than the distance between the receiver and the area to be clamped. For the clamping of the area to be clamped, for example a data carrier, a guide track is provided in the area of the receiver. This guide track is formed by a corresponding receiver in the area of the receiver, which has several, for example, three recesses. The clamping elements in the form of clamping rails are arranged in the recesses and the clamping rail is moved towards the receiver so that the clamp 2d92ce491b
