TxtReaderXpress Description: TxtReaderXpress is a handy and reliable application designed to convert any text into audio with high quality voices. In addition, it supports rich text. The Txt2Voice project, is a good starter project that will help you learn all the basics about how to create an app. There are code examples and documentation available and the project is hosted on GitHub. This demo app shows how to build a Firebase database app with push notifications, where each of your Firebase users has a locally installed .p12 file that you need to use for notifications. In the Firebase console, add a new app and add a new project to the project. Add this line of code in the index.html file:

var firebaseConfig = { apiKey: "AIzaSyDZ9aBX9ajR_kGqhXsOfFdsxSV7rUrYkUw", authDomain:
    "example.firebaseio.com", databaseURL: "", projectId: "example", storageBucket:
    "example.firebaseio.com", messagingSenderId: "379344244737" }; In the app directory, add the required directories and files, adding a.js file for the server. The db directory contains the Firebase database client library. The data directory contains all of your static HTML files and data. The list of all available options can be found here. This is the built-in Firebase SDK, the firebase

I just found it useful to have a text reader in my apps. I needed to use this stat with the boys, so I introduced it to them and had them roleplay a conversation. I had them introduce the subject first, then allow their listener to get in the first word. That way, it was up to them to come to a conclusion, not me. If I had just told them to roleplay and see what happened, they would have fallen into the trap I have told them about. "How is your day going?" "Oh, fine." She replied, "I was wondering if you could help me with something." "Sure, what do you need?" "I need some information." She replied, "I know that everyone has heard of the latest Star Trek movie." She paused for a moment to see if the listener
