have been active in trade discussions for the past couple of days.
And that was before they lost so hard to the Dodgers in Game 5 of the World Series. It's a reasonable assumption to wonder if things will get more interesting between now and October. Over the past few days, the Yankees have been on the market for such coveted commodities as Edwin Encarnacion, Rick Porcello, Craig Kimbrel, the No. 1 overall pick in the MLB draft and perhaps even Felix Hernandez. And at this stage of the trade season, they've probably found the only team in the sport to be willing to match every dollar they're asking for each of those players. If they're actually moving any of the above, they'll likely add two or three good players to the big club and maybe a couple of bullpen arms. The Yankees will most likely have one of those six or seven players ready to go when the calendar flips to October. Between now and then, they'll have the first- or second-round picks and all the pieces necessary to make the right move. There are so many angles to this: the contract status of CC Sabathia, David Robertson, Phil Hughes, etc., whether the team will try to get under the $197 million payroll threshold for the 2015 luxury tax as well as the $20 million-per-year for the final two years of Sabathia's deal and even the fact they still have to pay the final year of Hughes' deal. In the end, I'
