Double aortic arch (DAA) is a congenital malformation of the aortic arch that is relatively common in the Asian population. It is usually associated with complex congenital heart disease. The ligamentum arteriosum may be divided into a proximal and distal portion, with the distal portion being narrower than the proximal portion. We present a very rare case of a 4-day-old infant with a DAA, double innominate arteries, a Y-shaped origin of the left aortic arch, and a narrow division of the ligamentum arteriosum. Q: How to increase the padding between
