A: Based on your discussion, it looks like your problems are the same as for step 5 here: On the desktop, click the My Computer icon. In the navigation pane, click the drive that contains your CD-ROM. Double-click the CD-ROM drive, click the opening arrow, and then click Yes. Click Save. ... and also here: I was told to download the previous version of AutoCAD, 2018.x. In 2018.x, I found that the startup time was slow. The Startup Time-related registry key was set to 4 minutes, and the Startup Count was set to 0. The Startup Delay Time was set to 30 seconds. The Startup Timeout Value was set to 60 seconds. I used the Step-by-Step Guide for AutoCAD 2018: What this tells you is that you need to set these key values: Wait.Minutes = 0 StartupDelay.Minutes = 0 Wait.Count = 0 StartupDelay.Count = 0 StartupTime.Minutes = 0 StartupTimeout.Minutes = 0 Now how you do that is beyond me (I'm not familiar with Windows). If you can't figure that out, you could try a different installer, or you could always download the previous version that you tried to use. Read the Startup Time tutorial, and Make sure your first login or Windows start is as fast as possible. DESCRIPTION (adapted from the Abstract): The human carotid body (CB) is an important sensor that acts to maintain blood pH homeostasis. The observation that CB chemosensory neurons (CSN) are inhibited by hypoxia suggests that the CB contributes to arterial chemoreceptor function and this effect is mimicked by hyperoxia. The present study will determine the nature of the cellular and molecular mechanisms through which hyperoxia inhibits CSN activity, and determine if and how inhibition can be reversed. Preliminary studies have shown that 1) hyperoxia reverses CSN inhibition by blocking outward potassium currents and inhibiting the calcium-activated potassium current, and 2) hyperoxia prolongs the duration of the inhibitory potential, resulting in longer inhibition of CSN activity. Studies will determine 1) how
