What's New in the?

BTCWare ransomware is an advanced ransomware type that spies on you, places the data that you wish to keep confidential on their server, and then demands the users pay a hefty sum in order to decrypt their files. It is a variant of the Black Bart ransomware that has been developed and distributed by the site BTCWare since March 2017, including a number of campaigns that were directed toward various targeted users. The purpose of BTCWare ransomware is purely to extort money from the infected users. It is known that the developers of this particular variant of the most viral ransomware use different methods to achieve that. They are quite stealthy, hiding their infiltration in a variety of ways, one of them being by changing the contents of several files. The creators of BTCWare ransomware decided to make the infected users believe that the BTCWare will be able to access their files' originals only in exchange for money. They basically demand that the users pay through the mail or through a bitcoin wallet, the equivalent to paying through bitcoins. The "original" files could be pretty much anything, like a.docx,.pptx,.ppsx,.xslm,.xlsx,.chm,.mht,.pdf,.jpg,.png,.xls, or whatever. What makes this variant of the Black Bart ransomware so successful is the fact that it has been developed to infect a large number of computers. First of all, the developers of BTCWare ransomware chose to target the financial sector as the main targets of their virulent attacks. The users who are usually found in this particular field of activities are targeted because they are in possession of digital documents that contain a lot of confidential information. For that reason, BTCWare is able to implant itself in the users' machines without them noticing, before silently encrypting their files. The encrypted files are modified to contain the.doc,.docx,.ppt,.pptx,.xls, or.xlsx file extensions, being hidden inside each of them a website that plays out a clickbait-like type of a game to trick you into thinking that the files are worth almost $500, but in reality, the only thing you will be able to access is a ransom note on the desktop. Even though BTCWare is one of the most well-designed ransomware that allows you to decrypt your files, the developers of BTCWare ransomware have also chosen to surprise their victims by adding a number
