What's New In 360Works Scribe?

360Works Scribe is the one tool to get the information you need to know, when you need to know it. Scribe combines the power of optical character recognition (OCR) and natural language processing (NLP) to allow you to read and write text from the Microsoft Office and PDF document formats. Read and write PDFs, regardless of file format issues or poor quality of scans, and detect changes in text fields. Scribe is easy to use, fast and accurate. Overview: Reading and writing text from Microsoft Office and PDF files Scribe can read and write text from Microsoft Office and PDF files. You can search and annotate PDFs, even if the file was encrypted or you had a copy of the original. Scribe can even read text within Microsoft Word documents. You can even detect changes in the text using OCR and NLP. You can read and write text from Microsoft Office files directly into the PDF file. You can also specify the level of NLP processing you want to use to process the text, including OCR and NLP (default) or just OCR (less accurate). Text search You can search the text in a document, regardless of whether the text is in the PDF or in the Microsoft Office file. Scribe can search through different sections of text in the document, including the text in the file or in the PDF. You can also match the text in the file with text in the PDF. Scribe also works with the metadata in the file and in the PDF. Scribe can search through the text of the file and search through the metadata within the file. You can even search through PDF content and text in other files stored on your computer. Highlight any word in a file You can highlight any word in a Microsoft Office or PDF document. Scribe can scan your files and highlight words that match any criteria you want. You can highlight all the text that matches a word or a range of words. You can also highlight a specific page number or a range of pages. You can then search for the highlighted words in the file. You can also use Scribe to highlight words and text in the metadata in the file or in the PDF. Detect changes in text fields You can use Scribe to detect changes in the text fields of a Microsoft Office or PDF file. This includes editing, changing, adding, and removing text. You can also search for and highlight changes in the text fields. You can search the text in the file, in the PDF, in the text in other files on your computer, or even in the metadata. You can even search for changes in the text in the background, font, and graphics, not just in the foreground. Output You can get as much or as little information as you want when you use Scribe. You can generate reports that are specific to the information you need, such as changes in text or the location of specific words
