Premium Network Allocation Tool is a small and easy-to-use utility for managing network connections and assigning them to specific users or groups. You may easily configure the computer to be used in a home network. The program is specifically designed to allow you to manage network bandwidth consumption on a specific computer by dynamically configuring which devices may use which amount of bandwidth and when they may access it. What's more, you may specify speed limits for web and e-mail traffic, which means that in the event of excessive traffic you may block or limit the access to specific web pages and mail servers, which are considered too heavy for the available bandwidth. Simplistic appearance Visual appeal isn't in the program's key focus. The user interface is designed to keep the interface as simple as possible, as all it does is allowing you to configure the network. Most of the parameters are found in the interface's menu bar, which is very convenient to work with. There's no need to click through the numerous and unneeded sub-menus. Although we have to admit that on first sight the interface looks a bit complicated, we soon realized that there are not too many parameters to edit. No clutter, as the program offers a dedicated interface for managing network connections. One of the program's more handy features is its ability to monitor bandwidth consumption from the network. During our testing we have noticed that Network Allocation Tool is very efficient in this regard and quickly detects network problems and alerts you about them. It's worth mentioning that the utility comes bundled with only two parameters. How's that for simplicity? Overview: Toastmasters Timer is a small Windows application with only a few dedicated parameters to guide you when using the tool. Features: The program sports a minimalist design, so it doesn't require extensive computer knowledge. The timer itself works as a standalone application, so you are allowed to start it even if you aren't logged in to your computer. It automatically plays a sound notification when the time is up and colors the background of the active window red. You're also allowed to start, stop, resume, or pause the timer. Since it doesn't depend on third-party libraries, it doesn't clog up your computer's resources. Some other cool features of the software include editing timers, customizable sounds, and tooltips. I found it useful not only as a time clock, but also when delivering a speech. Though it's not the best clock I've ever used, it is a simple "one-stop" solution for when you need one. This review is for a trial version of Toastmasters Timer v. 10 5 Goes well with Toastmasters! Posted by Alan (Suitland, MD) on 09/23/2011 I agree with the positive reviews below. I have been using it for last month and a half and it works very well with the Toastmasters software. I had been using the Toastmasters timer to get the time on my computer, to set up a time for my speech and to take notes and then hand them over at the meeting. The schedule software seems to work fine with Timer but the notes function is not reliable. I believe that is something they could fix but if they do, it would be nice to save them in the calendar. I can be off by two or three minutes but I don't like my speech to be off by a second or two. The Toastmasters Timer program was easy to install, easy to use, and is very reliable. I used it before in Toastmasters sessions to time my speech, and I am also now able to time my speeches using it and review my notes to finish up. I like the simplicity of the program. There are a few other programs out there, but this one was the most convenient. Plus, it is free, there aren't any advertisements (unlike other programs) and it is easy to get rid of if you
