the marriage between a Christian woman and a Muslim doctor. "I feel that this is a step too far, and I'm afraid that we cannot let this happen without a fight," argued Justice Evelyn Lim on behalf of the Court. Both had tied the knot in a traditional wedding at the basilica in 2014. Each appealed their nuptials in the Supreme Court, which last week ruled against the couple, leading to their separation. "I believe in separation of church and state, this is not a religious issue," said Dr. "I believe in marriage equality for all, gay or straight, and I believe that family is a sacred institution that is worthy of respect." The landmark ruling overturned a 2015 decision of the Federal Court of Australia that had struck down the marriage equality law. Separate laws in Australia and Ireland that allow same-sex couples to wed do not affect religious marriages. SEARCH: Addis Abeba BIDESCO ruggali 2 persone: Our court's decision to refuse to set up a body to examine Bill C-59 is not a "stay-the-course" decision as we did not ask for a stay in the first place. We are satisfied that all of the necessary legal steps were taken to exhaust all possible options for seeking legal advice outside of the court process. I am satisfied that the situation
