À And here is my code: #!/bin/bash I=$1 for i in $(ls | grep "$1") do awk -v i=$1 -F'â€' '{print i/1000}' si done But I want to get results like this: A: You don't need to use awk if you're using Bash: for i in $(ls | grep "$1") do printf "%2f" "${i%.*}"e" done You can replace the formatting with the printf syntax as you wish. This requires Bash version 4. A: You could use cut: for i in $(ls | grep "$1") do echo $i | cut -f2 -f1 done Alternatively, you can use awk: for i in $(ls | grep "$1") do awk '1 == ""$1"" {print $0}' done A: If the number of files is limited, using grep with -l might be cheaper. ls | grep -l "$1" | cut -f1,2 -f1 | awk '1 == ""$1"" {print $0}' Basically, the shell reads ls, feeds the file names through grep, feeds the results through cut, feeds the list of file names through awk and prints the matching file name. This should be much faster than using awk to read the file name and print, and less bash (and slow awk) overhead. Rep. Greg McCalman (R-Monroe) has introduced a bill into the Louisiana House of Representatives that would require Louisiana parish and municipal school boards to "recognize degrees from colleges and universities in any state that the college or university is authorized to grant degrees, or that in good faith the college or university determines that the degree it issues is of equal or higher value to that degree conferred by another college or university." Critics of the bill point to Louisiana as the only state in the United States without reciprocity with all other states in granting degrees. "There is no reciprocity for Louisiana State University, for Louisiana State University-Shreveport, for 648931e174

Development of a convenient procedure to assay for plasma fibronectin in humans. A simple, sensitive and accurate procedure for quantitating plasma fibronectin is described. The method involves the heat denaturation of the plasma protein with high urea (8 M), chromatography on Sepharose 4B (fractionated and unfractionated) and subsequent assay by hemagglutination and/or by a specific peroxidase-linked assay. The antiserum to plasma fibronectin used in the assays does not interfere with the heat denaturation of the plasma protein. Therefore, the assay detects both the unmodified plasma fibronectin and the polymeric form of the protein. In the peroxidase-linked assay, it is less than 0.5% of the plasma proteins that interfere with the assay. The accuracy and precision of the assay are similar to that reported for previously available immunoassays. Using the peroxidase-linked assay, plasma fibronectin and fibronectin in serum were measured in normal subjects, patients with fibrotic liver disease, alcoholic hepatitis, sepsis and malignancy. Plasma fibronectin was similar in normal subjects and in patients with liver disease. In sepsis and in malignancy, plasma fibronectin was significantly elevated. In cancer patients, plasma fibronectin correlated with the level of fibronectin in the ascitic fluid.S. 361, 111 S.Ct. 1877, 114 L.Ed.2d 404 (1991). The court held that even assuming arguendo that these claims are viable they would still be time-barred because they could have been raised before the administrative agencies.
